Olle Hagman Sweden
Writer's Cordwood
Cabin (Kubbhus).
Olle built himself a beautiful cabin in the Swedish countryside.
Before retiring as a professor of social anthropology, Olle researched and visited cordwood homes all over Sweden and then wrote an detailed article about them for the Cordwood Conference Papers 2011.
Olle presented that paper
in Winnipeg in June 2011.
Olle's website is www.kubbhus.suntuubi.se.

Heidi Vilkmán was born in Finland and spent the last summer making a cobwood cottage. Heidi is an artist by trade and placed all kinds of interesting motifs in the walls of her cottage. Heidi also sells her creations online at Larry Schuth was kind enough to share some photos of his gorgeous cordwood creation in the Adirondacks in New York. This labor of love is off grid and gives the family ample cause to take an unplugged vacation.

Tamas Abel of Hungary sent these photos of his cordwood summer cottage in the northeastern portion of Hungary. Tamas is a border guard and spends some of his spare time figuring out how to make beautiful creations with nature's gifts. His idea of pegging the log ends is amazing. Note the log ends below are pegged and have a special painted foam like mortar.

Melissa Ford's beautiful cordwood cabin in Pennsylvania. A work of love and dedication, Melissa was persistent and determined to get her cabin done. Impressive!

The Merrill Area Recreation Area decided to put up an entrance sign. The artist Andy Goretski suggested a cordwood sign. The Park and Rec Department approved and here you have a 14' by 8's cordwood frame with 10" cordwood infill. Andy also made the sign on top. The LED sign in the middle is offering a Disco Deer Skate (can you sense that this is one day before hunting season opens?)

Sandy Clidas Cordstead one hour from Montreal, Quebec, Canada is now open for vacation rental.

Sandy Clidas finished his round on round project to make his Cordstead complete. One of the most beautiful cordwood homes anywhere in the world, Sandy is now opening his "littlewood" addition to folks who would like to get a taste of living in the cordwood round, before tackling a building on their own.

If you are interested in spending a day or a week, contact Sandy:

We sure do appreciate folks sending pictures of their projects and our goal is to share as many as we are able. They are bound to inspire other cordwood builders.

Cordwood Construction Best Practices continues to sell well.

I am working on a Kindle version for Amazon.com.

It also comes in ebook as a PDF and has been very popular in Europe and Canada (no shipping fees:0)
